

In 2024, Arizona passed Proposition 139—an extreme amendment that created a “fundamental right to abortion” for every individual. Voters were told it would simply “stop extremist politicians” and put “women and doctors back in charge.”

But what really happened?

The truth was buried under a flood of misleading ads. The pro-abortion campaign, backed by millions in out-of-state donations, outspent the pro-life opposition by more than 30 to 1. On Election Day, 61% of voters passed the amendment—many without realizing what it would actually do.

Just days after the election was certified:

- Dec 3, 2024: Abortion activists sued to strike down Arizona’s 15-week abortion limit.
- March 5, 2025: The judge ruled Arizona’s abortion limit law unconstitutional.
- May 23, 2025: Abortion activists sued again—this time to eliminate Arizona’s 24-hour waiting period and allow abortion pills to be mailed without ever seeing a doctor in person.

And they’re just getting started.

Amendment backers told the media they've identified more than 40 abortion laws they plan to challenge—including commonsense protections like:

- Requiring that only doctors perform abortions
- Banning taxpayer funding of abortion
- Requiring parental notice for minors

One extremist group actually publishes a list of these so-called “barriers” on the homepage of its website—saying they’re “working to remove these barriers!”

This is what they do:

Deceive voters. Pass an extreme amendment. Then they systematically dismantle every law that in any way limits abortion—one lawsuit at a time—even if removing these laws harms women by allowing abortions in unsanitary facilities or without proper medical oversight.

We're asking what if this happened in Arkansas?

What if well-funded, out-of-state abortion groups spent millions to confuse voters here?

What if enough people believed the lie?

Arizona is a warning. We cannot ignore it, and we must be ready! Would you share one of our Facebook posts or forward this email to a friend?
